I am the Enterostomal Therapy Nurse at Huntington Memorial Hospital, a 600 bed acute care facility located in Pasadena, California. I have been using Calmoseptine Ointment for the last five months on a trial basis and have recently stocked it in our distribution department for use throughout the facility.

I have found Calmoseptine Ointment to be extremely effective in the care of patients with impaired skin integrity related to urinary and fecal incontinence. This treatment approach has been optimal compared to others when treating areas in close proximity to the peri-rectal region.

We have seen a significant improvement within a 3-4 day period. Patients have communicated a significant decrease in discomfort with the products use. Calmoseptine has been well excepted by the hospital staff because of its ease of application and local response to irritated skin.

Sincerely,
